Investigate Reports.

The most active season for liars is during a campaign. The present one is no exception. It would be foolish to refuse all the lies now being told, but I want to say a few words about some of the stuff I have heard.

Mrs. Lackey is the subject of much of this. Good advice given the children while visiting the schools has in some cases been distorted into something objectionable by partisan and unscrupulous persons. She probably believes that "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." The way I see it is that any one who does not believe this, practice it and teach it in order to train children in the capacity of teacher and more especially to be Superintendent of Schools. It is also charged that she is "rich." I am sorry to say that this is also untrue, as investigation will show any one who thinks this is a point worth considering in the selection of an official. There is not an unfavorable report that may truthfully be made against her election.

Another special victim of the campaign lies seems to be John Burns for Sheriff. He, also, is said to be wealthy, lives in a mansion, will be "hard on the people," etc. The truth is that he is a farmer and operates a small farm near Louisa. He cultivates this and has never done anything else except to collect taxes at times when it did not interfere with his farm work. Also, he operates the Louisa Flouring Mills one year. For two or three years, of my personal knowledge, he has lived in a rented four-room cottage. He is a plain, common, sober, moral citizen. The writer is simply telling the truth in answer to untrue reports in circulation. Any man who honestly wants to know the truth is invited to investigate for himself.

As to Mr. Burns being hard on the people there is no reason whatever to believe any such thing. I am reliably informed that he never made a levy, although he has collected a lot of taxes. With such record what grounds are there for believing that he would oppress any one? He is specially fitted for the office. He can give the bond. He will do his duty. He will treat everybody fairly.

There is much that might be said in favor of almost every candidate on the Democratic ticket, but as I started out to speak only of the false reports I have heard, I will leave the rest to some one else. Voter.

The County Fair.

The NEWS would very much like to write the word "success" in great big capitals all over the fair which was held last week in Louisa, but it cannot be consistently done. There were too many people in attendance who know that so far as a display is concerned it was entirely too small to be spoken of in a way which would lead people to think that the fair was in hardly any respect successful. The attendance really was good. The weather both days was exceptionally fine and we had visitors from every part of the county. Saturday was pay day for the teachers, and they were in Louisa in large numbers. (Don't understand us to say that the display amounted to nothing, what there was of it was excellent. There were pumpkins and peanuts, potatoes and peas, pickles and poultry, pigs and ponies. There were bolts and bread, bedspreads and bedding. We had hams and hoppers, corn and cobs, and corn and cobs. By the way, how do you spell this word? There were men and maidens, and girls—lots of 'em. We mean of the latter. And all these things, and more besides, were first-class in quality. But there was not enough. We do not know why our men and women who raise and make things do not take a greater interest in making and raising the very best that grows and is manufactured. Why, down in the blue-grass, where the women are no prettier than ours, where the corn and other field products are not so large as ours, one fair is hardly over before they plan for the next. And you visit them at their homes they point with pride, not to the few dollars they won, but to the blue ribbon, the prized tribute to successful competition. Now let us begin right away to get ready to beat all creation in the size and quality of next year's display. Let a program list be prepared and published long before the time fixed for the fair. Have your list of judges named in advance and sent to them, so they may appreciate the distinction and take an interest in the enterprise and help it along.

FOR SALE.

10 one fourth to one half bred Angora rana goats and one Registered Angora Buck all for $50.00. If taken at once. Also, pure bred Angora high in pairs only $15.00 to $25.00 per pair. H. N. Fischer, Webbville, KY.

Lys Garred, of Anaconda, Montana, was in Louisa Monday en-route to see his father, the venerable Uncle Dave. This is Mr. Garred's first home coming in ten years. He is one of the many Big Sandy boys who has not been content to stay in the town, and who has gone to the front. He went from this county to the Kentucky State College, graduated with honor and is now occupying the responsible and lucrative position of mechanical engineer for the Anaconda Copper Company, the biggest copper concern in the world. Give a young Big Sandy health, energy and a chance and he'll do the rest.

The concrete pavements in front of G. W. Castle's and P. H. Vaughan's and W. F. Shipman's store are finished and add greatly the appearance of the property.

A part of our new stock of millinery is already in the store and the remainder will be here very soon. Don't fail to call and see them.

W. M. Justice.

Clyde Waldeck Thompson.

The warm sympathy of this entire community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Thompson because of the death of their only child. The NEWS noted last week the serious illness of the little fellow, but at that time it was thought he was on the way to recovery. Such a happy termination was not to be, however, for on Tuesday morning death released it from pain forever, and the following afternoon its inanimate little body, bedewed with tears and garlanded with buds and blossoms, was borne to the City of the Dead and tenderly laid to rest. The sympathy for the stricken parents of little Clyde was notable in the large attendance of friends and the rich offering of flowers and rarest flowers. Their splendid beauty and rich perfume were mute but eloquent evidence of the love and esteem of many relatives and friends, and their regret for the loss of so bright and lovable a child. Not yet two brief years had the winsome boy gladdened this home. The hopes of a proud father, the affections of a doting mother, the love of other kindred, all centered on the innocent prattler, but vain and unattaining expectations and desires. The shadow came—the spectre of a Monster who has crushed so many homes, who has crushed so many hopes and hearts, and Clyde, God's Christmas gift to father and mother, is gone from their earthly care.

As the sweet cadences of that rhythmic prayer of ecstasy—that sweet expression of abiding hope, "Jesus, lover of my soul, let me in Thy love, fall upon the cross of the flaming assembly it was infinitely comforting to know that while the flooding has flown from the parent nest it has found refuge from all storms in the bosom to which it may fly and find a refuge.

In the desolation of woe, their hearts and hearts shrouded in the gloom of a sorrow felt only by those who have loved and lost, the heartfelt condolence of all is proffered to the bereaved.

Big Sandy Opportunity.

The following from the Courier-Journal is one of the echoes from the State Development Convention held last week in Louisville showing what a great opportunity it was to get information before the world about our resources and needs.

We are sorry to say that the opportunity was not taken advantage of as it should have been by the Big Sandy people.

Writing in the Chattanooga Tradesman, H. N. Thompson, its editor, who attended the development convention, said that the convention was as fine a representative body of business men as could be gathered together under similar circumstances. He complimented Gov. Beckham for his speech before the convention and lauded its results.

J. H. C. Barr, a Philadelphia, Pa., capitalist, who is interested in iron, coal and agricultural developments, has written for copies of the speeches relating to the development of Kentucky's mineral resources. He is particularly anxious to secure copies of the speeches on coal and iron development, railroad advances and the work being done in the Big Sandy valley.

Quite an unfortunate accident happened at Lock No. 1, Catlettsburg, last Saturday morning, but fortunately no one was much hurt and the resulting damage will be soon repaired. The pool above the dam was full and with the huge mass of water tore an opening through the needles about 20 feet wide, the rushing torrent sweeping all before it into the Ohio. The trustees' representatives were caught before they reached the wharftop. A young man in a skiff was caught in the torrent and young fellow was nearly drowned. He was whirled about at a furious rate, being entirely submerged many times and finally tossed upon the shore where he was caught and carried out of reach of the big waves.

The accident consisted of the breaking off of the iron plate which was converted into the wall of the lock, and when this gave way it caused the first shape bar to fall into the water thus releasing about twenty needles. In connection with this accident we are glad to report that no blame can be attached to the management in charge or to the engineers who designed the same. The plate of iron in the wall is still there to tell the tale. More than one half of this plate was cracked in two long before this accident happened, as is shown by the rusty crack as distinguished from the fresh fracture.

It is simply an unfortunate occurrence of getting a cracked plate of iron in one of the most important places in the entire construction. The plate of iron extends about four feet in the wall and is about two feet wide and two feet thick. It is broken off flush with the wall, but no damage was done to any of the concrete work. As this plate is at the crest of the Lock wall it will be replaced. To do so will require to cut out a place two feet square and four feet long and then concrete in it a new plate.

In Dreary Nevada.

In a letter ordering the address of his paper changed to a point in Nevada, a former Louisa "boy" writes interestingly of the country. We shall not use his name here for fear the article might fall into unscrupulous hands out in that country.

"My work here is very pleasant, but I am afraid I shall never get used to the country. When I look for bluegrass, I see sagebrush, or possibly some alfalfa if my eyes happen to fall upon a spot favored with irrigation.

I look for a Kentucky negro with a happy, smiling face. I meet the gaze of a wooden-faced Chinaman or a surly, feline, ill-mannered looking Indian, neither of whom is held in as high esteem here as a negro is there. I believe I would rather meet Wash Frater on the street and have to shake hands with him. Finally, if I cast my peepers about for a Kentucky Colonel, I behold a "rolling stone" who has come here because he couldn't succeed somewhere else bearing such a name as Barnaball, Laromba, Calrough, or Glocier creating a euphemism that they might have left a better name behind for reasons best known to themselves and to the Sheriff where they came from.

Nearly all the horses have been branded. Even Kentucky whicker has not reached here in great quantity. Only a few varieties are seen here in the windows. I have no fault to find with the Nevada women. They are away ahead of their surroundings.

Alfalfa is practically the only thing that is cultivated here. They say the roots go 12 to 15 feet deep sometimes. Spraying of the territory of alfalfa the other day, I said I believed it would grow in hell. When my wife replied, "Why of course, don't you see it all around here?"

If I am ever unfortunate enough to die, I hope I shall die in Kentucky or some other sea-port out of sight of these Nevadas. I may get used to living here, but I don't want to die there very often.

D. J. Barthelet, Jr., & Co.

James Dameron, whose home was in Laynesville, Floyd county, was accidentally killed at Williamson last Thursday. He was a car repairer and was working in the railroad yard about a mile from town, where the accident occurred. He was making some repairs on a car when in some way he was caught between two moving cars and was squeezed to death, dying almost instantly. His body was brought to Louisa, Friday afternoon by a delegation from the Order of Car Repairers of which he was a member, and was taken to Laynesville on No. 28, where his father, Wright Dameron, now resides. Dameron was 29 years of age and single. On the morning of the day he met his untimely end the young man had been importuned to take some insurance in the Order to which he belonged, and said he would when he came back from work at night.

The Masons of Wayne, W. Va., recently dedicated a new hall and lodge room in that town. They had, besides the dedicatory services, a splendid big noonday spread of good things and a fine oration by Rev. John T. Johnston, gallant ex-soldier, devoted Mason and venerated preacher of the Gospel.

Miss Lella Snyder left for Cincinnati last Monday to enter the classical school known as Bryn Mawr in Clifton, one of the prettiest of the city's suburbs. Her course of study will be in the main English literature, music and French. Miss Snyder will have her home with Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Thomas.

At the opening of the Development Convention in Louisville last week Governor Beckham recognized W. A. Robinson, who presented resolutions of sympathy and respect for the death of S. S. Savage, of Ashland, Ky. Mr. Savage was president of the last State Development Convention.

James H. O'Brien and A. J. Conley went to Louisville Monday afternoon to represent Apperson Lodge and Louisa Chapter at the Masonic Grand Lodge and chapter in session in that city. Matt Moore, of Louisa, went to represent Jake Rice Lodge.

The experiment of having a street crossing constructed of concrete will be tried. G. W. Castle has just installed a handsome concrete pavement in front of his home, and now a crossing of the same material is being laid from his corner to the pavement in front of Stewart's.

Our line of fancy silks and high grade shawls is complete. We carry all widths and sizes. Prompt attention to mail orders. Frost & Garred's Big New Store, 100 and Ave. Huntington, W. Va.
